Significant events in fiscal 2016

- ❖ Annual turnover for 2016 stood at €64.2 million, down 2%.
- ❖ Positive profitability, with operating income of €0.7 million.
- ❖ The very highly-anticipated game Gran Turismo® Sport was pushed back until 2017, resulting in a delayed launch of the new Thrustmaster Gran Turismo® Sport-licensed racing wheel for PlayStation®4.
- ❖ An overall sales increase of 24% in North America, and implementation of a new distribution network.
- ❖ Opening of new distributors, particularly in China, Japan, the Nordic countries and Eastern Europe/Russia.
- ❖ Launch of the brand-new TS-PC Racer racing wheel during the fourth quarter, allowing Thrustmaster to position itself in the high-end PC racing wheels market.
- ❖ Positioning of Thrustmaster in the eSports market, and use of the TS-PC Racer racing wheel for the Formula E Vegas eRace competition in the United States.
- ❖ Rollout of a new range of flight simulation accessories as part of Thrustmaster's 25th anniversary celebration in the industry.
- ❖ Receipt of the CES Innovation Awards Honoree distinction in January 2017 (for the fourth consecutive year), awarded this year to the T.16000M FCS Flight Pack for its technological advances providing flight sim pilots with an unprecedented degree of precision.

Hercules P32 DJ 2016 DJ Mag Tech Award winner

In September, Hercules was thrilled to announce that its Hercules P32 DJ controller had won the DJ Mag Tech Award prize in the category for the best DJ controllers under £600. The contest took place at the BPM | PRO 2016 exhibition in Birmingham, England. The Hercules P32 DJ had been shortlisted by DJ Mag in the DJ controllers under £600 category, amongst other strong competitors. DJ Mag is a British monthly magazine dedicated to electronic dance music and DJs. In particular, DJ Mag praised the synergy of the controller/software combo: “The Hercules P32 DJ comes fully equipped with the included DJUCED™ 40° software – a match made in heaven.”

Ghost Recon Wildlands Edition

Virtual reality and simulation games

Following the launch of the PlayStation VR headset (Sony's virtual reality system for PlayStation®4) last October:

- ❑ In February, Sony announced that it had sold nearly one million units (915,000 in total) of its headset since the launch.
- ❑ Its competitors (Oculus and HTC VIVE™) have sold approximately 400,000 units to date.

The emergence of virtual reality is an important opportunity for Thrustmaster. The brand has signed numerous partnership agreements with the biggest developers of virtual reality games:

- Sony (for the game Drive Club VR)
- Codemasters (for the game DiRT Rally)
- Bigben (for the game WRC 6)
- Gaijin Entertainment (for the game War Thunder)
- Frontier (for the game Elite Dangerous).

Thrustmaster's accessories now work with most flight and car racing simulation virtual reality games.

The New Carbonball Leather?

I really do not know what happened to me, but I used to hate racing games. I mean, really hate them. I played old, old racing games on Atari. I had some of the first ones available on PC. They did not appeal to me in the least. Instant buyer's remorse for the most part. Then something strange happened. 3D graphics technology changed that opinion. Not only did hardware accelerated 3D help me get over my dislike, but the improvements in physical simulations also allowed a greater depth of experience. There is getting my first force feedback device and NFS: Porsche Unleashed and I was hooked from there on out.

Prospects for 2017

In 2017 the Group will benefit from a strong crop of top-tier video games encouraging sales of accessories, particularly in the realm of car racing. The games Gran Turismo® Sport on PlayStation®4, the new Forza Motorsport® on the Xbox One® console and PC, and Project Cars™ 2 are very highly anticipated amongst gamers.

Two new Gran Turismo-licensed wheels have been added to the Group's racing wheel ranges, along with the new TS-PC Racer, to meet the needs of the most demanding gamers battling for supremacy in the world of eSports.

The Group forecasts growth with respect to its turnover and operating income in fiscal 2017.
